SUBJECT: UPDATE ON CONSTRUCTION MANAGEMENT CONTRACTS – RATE CHANGES AND NEW RFQ

Background

As we have been discussing over the past several months, LAUSD's Bond Program is experiencing cash flow constraints as a result of the State's continued hold on the release of matching funds for school construction and modernization and the restrictions on the District's ability to issue local bonds due to a decrease in Assessed Valuation. In an effort to identify funds to ensure that our current Bond Program can be completed as planned, the Facilities Services Division began exploring ways to reduce costs associated with the use of professional services and construction management contracts.

After discussions with our construction management and professional services partners and much analysis, we determined that it would be equitable and appropriate to reduce the rates charged to the District by 20 percent and to also release a new RFQ for services. On January 5, 2010 a notification was sent to the construction management and professional services firms informing them of the 20 percent rate reduction in their current contracts. On January 7, 2010 the new RFQ was released and is due today by 3:00 p.m.

I have had the opportunity to speak with each of you regarding this topic, however given the closing of the RFQ, the Facilities specific discussion at the January 26 Special Board Meeting, and the anticipated Board action on the new RFQ in March, I wanted to provide you with detailed information on the changes to our construction management contracts.

Rate Change for Current Construction Management Contract

The entire District, including the Bond Program, is suffering unusually significant budget pressures. There is an open discussion regarding a possible Districtwide 12 percent salary reduction, furlough days and massive layoffs of certificated and classified LAUSD staff. Given the difficult budget environment and the need to identify alternative funding for improvements to our students' learning environments, it is reasonable to have contract professionals and their construction management firms share in cost saving measures.

We received feedback from a number of prime contractors and sub-consultants, when options for both retaining key staff and identifying cost savings were discussed. Many firms stated that no change would be best for their operations, which was not surprising given the negative response that most people likely have to rate reductions and a decrease in profits. Several firms did state that they could work with up to a 30 percent reduction. The average of the suggestions offered is 20 percent.

Small Businesses in Current Construction Management Contract and New RFQ

Current and new small firms have the option to partner with prime construction management firms with existing contracts. There is absolutely no change to this opportunity under our existing agreements. To further ensure the participation of small businesses in our Bond Program, mobility of sub construction management firms and individuals between prime firms is also being permitted. Additionally, to be even more inclusive, we are also permitting ultra small firms (fewer than ten) to apply for an exemption to the current minimum standards for experience and number of employees.

For the new RFQ, we have reached out to a large number of new and existing small firms to encourage participation. We anticipate that up to 40 new small firms will be approved as qualified prime contractors on our Program. This is an unprecedented opportunity for firms to become a prime contract partner. With the elimination of sub-consulting firms we are taking the middle man out of the equation, thus allowing each firm to profit only from of their direct services (i.e. prime consulting firms are able to take a portion of the rate paid for a sub construction management firm) and to prevent the penalization of small firms that have to pay a portion of their rates to their prime construction management firm.

New RFQ and Reduced Profits

The new RFQ will mandate a specific multiplier to determine a firm's profit and costs for overhead. Billing rates will be based upon the selected individuals unburdened direct hourly wage (that is within a range defined by the District that is appropriate for the position and individual's experience/education) multiplied by a factor of 1.8. This (1.8) is the average of the suggested rates that were provided over the last three months. Staff and many small local, diversely governed companies view this markup as a good balance between cost and revenue. Please note that LACCD is considering a similar rate reduction.

We are hopeful that all of our construction management partners will see this as an opportunity to continue to grow with LAUSD. Public agencies and businesses in all aspects of the US economy are looking for ways to be more efficient in their operations. Large private companies have many options available to reduce overhead and improve the efficiency of business operations during difficult economic times. However there is a possibility that with a decrease in profit, firms may infer they will remove or actually remove their staff from the Bond Program. Though this is a possibility, we need to do all we can to save precious bond dollars. We do not believe that is a serious concern as LAUSD's Bond Program continues to be the largest public works program in the region. Moreover, other agencies have reduced rates for consulting services.

I hope you find this information helpful. As always, if you have any questions or require additional information, please contact me or Greg Garcia, Director of Facilities Contracts.
